

Which Outcome Measures are used in a BUSS® Intervention?

Measures help us to know whether what we're doing at BUSS® is helping the children and families we're working with. They give us useful information about a child's starting point and mean we can focus our work to get the best outcomes for children. Where relevant, it is a requirement of ASGSF funding to provide them with outcome measure scores at the beginning and end of our work. We really appreciate you taking the time to complete these measures.

Before we get started (* and again at the end of our work) we ask you to complete the following measures:

BUSS® Screening Tool

Here we're asking you to notice how your child is moving in their everyday life. We hope the webinar that we send will help you to make sense of this!

Strengths and Difficulties Questionnaire (SDQ)*

This is a broad measure that is widely used to understand behaviour, emotions and relationships.

Thinking About Your Child Questionnaire*

This helps us to understand more about your relationship with your child and what we could usefully do to support family life.

Brief Assessment Checklist (for Children / for Adolescents)*

This is designed for children who've experienced early adversity and helps us understand how they're coping with the challenges they might experience day to day.

After the assessment, we'll think together about:

Goal Based Outcomes (GBOs)

It's important we're working on things that we know BUSS® can help with and that matter most to you and your child. We'll agree and score goals together at the beginning and end of our work, but also use them to keep us on track.

Human Figure Drawings

Drawing and writing skills can be tricky to master, so as part of the initial and final BUSS® assessments, we will ask your child to draw the best picture they can of a whole person.

When our work together has finished, we'll ask you to complete:

Experience of Service Questionnaire (ESQ)

This is a short survey that asks about your experience working with us. We use feedback from families to constantly shape our service.
